Profile

Katherine is an experienced and highly regarded junior barrister with an established practice in the complimentary areas of employment and discrimination, education, safeguarding and the regulation of professional misconduct.

She was recently appointed to the Attorney General's C Panel.

She brings to her practice a wide range of experience, before joining chambers, Katherine worked at the European Commission for the department of consumer protection and assisted the prosecution of perpetrators of the Rwandan genocide at the UN Tribunal in Tanzania.

Katherine acts in the private sector for a range of corporate clients, individuals, and charities.

She is a registered provider on the Bar Public Access Scheme and is a panel member of the National Bar Pro Bono Unit.

Education

Katherine studied at St Catharine's College, Cambridge and won the Lord Gooderson award for outstanding academic performance. She also won the Lord Bowen, Wadham and Wolfson academic Scholarships from Lincoln's Inn for her performance in her bar exams.

Appointments

Katherine sits as a panel member on the Camden Council School Appeal Board and determines appeals relating to school admissions and exclusion.

She is also a panel member to the International Paralympic Committee (IPC) anti-doping and classification appeal boards and adjudicates on alleged breaches of the anti-doping code and in relation to appeals against an athlete's assigned sports class.

Training

Katherine enjoys providing interactive training to solicitors and clients; recent topics have included: 'Disability discrimination update', 'Risk assessments under the microscope: an exploration of legal standards and best practice', 'GDPR' and 'Discrimination in goods and services'
